

MOUTH TO MOUTH – A FILM BY ALISON MURRAY

A tip for cineastes,
festival directors,
and other
Berlinale VIPs!

Do your damn best to catch the sneak preview of Alison Murray's Mouth to Mouth, a debut feature by a talented young Canadian director. It's one of those films that crawls under your skin and doesn't let go. You will leave the Berlinale with images from this radical movie still buzzing in your head. And Mouth to Mouth features another incredible performance by this year's Sundance darling Ellen Page (Hard Candy). Executive Producer Atom Egoyan says: »This is a truly adventurous and original film. For years, Alison Murray has been making extraordinary shorts which combine her choreographic skills with a finely tuned sense of camera gesture and play. Mouth to Mouth urgently conveys the complex dynamics of an individual against a tribe, compassionately revealing both the seductions and the horrors of indoctrination and liberty.«

Sherry (Ellen Page – in photo, courtesy Egoli Tossell Film) is spotted on the streets by Tiger (August Diehl). He recruits her for SPARK (Street People Armed with Radical Knowledge), a cult collective with easy rules and the promise of a safe Shangri-la in a Portuguese vineyard. It turns out to be Animal Farm instead ... Directed by Alison Murray, who at the age of fifteen also ran away from Canada to London. »In the 1980s, I joined a cult. Mouth to Mouth is an attempt to understand how that could have happened.«
